An ecclesiastical funeral gives proper honor to the body

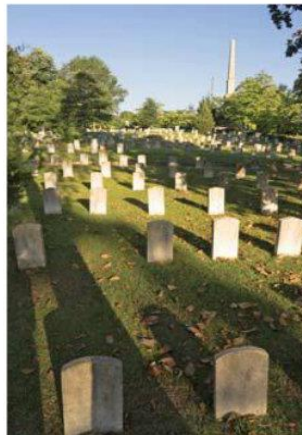

My husband is buried in a public cemetery, which is not consecrated ground. Am I permitted to be buried next to him, and can the priest bless and consecrate our final resting place?

I commend your care in this matter. The Catechism stresses that “the bodies of the dead must be treated with respect and charity, in faith and hope of the Resurrection. The burial of the dead is a corporal work of mercy” (CCC 2300). However, it makes no reference to the place of burial—only the manner in which our bodies are treated after death (that is, conditions for autopsy, organ donation, and cremation).

Canon law “earnestly recommends that the pious custom of burying the bodies of the deceased be observed”; by doing so properly and receiving an ecclesiastical funeral, you honor your body, witness to our belief in the resurrection of the body, and bring “the solace of hope to the living” (Canon 1176). It later specifies that “where possible, the Church is to have its own cemeteries or at least areas in civil cemeteries that are designated for the deceased members of the faithful and properly blessed. If this cannot be achieved, however, then individual graves are to be properly blessed” (Canon 1240). Given this, it would seem that there is no objection to your being buried in the grave next to your husband or any difficulty in requesting that the priest bless your final resting place.

Come, Holy Spirit, refresh our souls when we are tired and discouraged. This world will one day pass away, and all of your children will live together in heaven forever. Brighten our hearts and send us human friendships that bring out the best in us. Give us companions full of your peace, joy, and kindness, so that we can learn from them and grow in holiness. Amen.

From Father Khoa's Desk...

Dear Parishioners and Friends,

The Scripture readings for this 33rd Sunday invite us to reflect on the Second Coming of Jesus Christ at the end of time. The Church's tradition speaks of this as the eschaton or the "end times", and we are asked to consider the "final things" or "last things", i.e. death and resurrection, heaven and hell, and the final judgment. Hopefully as we reflect on these future events, their reality will have a significant influence on how we live our lives today.

The teaching of Jesus that we find in the Gospel of Luke today (Lk 21: 5-19) provides us with an important insight into how we can deal with this reality in our daily lives. The lengthy description that Jesus gives of all the trials and tribulations that we will face as believers is not meant to be an actual account of particular events at the end of the world. Rather Jesus is speaking of things that we all face, in one form or another, every day of our lives: personal setbacks, losses, misunderstandings, rejection, persecution, violence, etc. These are real challenges that confront real people all the time. Jesus tells us to face them courageously, patiently, with perseverance and confidence in the grace of God. When we do so and act with faith, the kingdom of God is indeed breaking forth anew into our world. In the process we are transformed and we help change our world for the better. In the Gospel Jesus calls us to renew our trust in his promise: "Remember ... I myself shall give you wisdom ... by your perseverance you will secure your lives."

May God bless all of us!
